Policyholder Loss Narrative (Online Portal Submission):
I was driving home on Sunday evening around 8:30 PM traveling westbound on Stevens Creek Boulevard. As I was approaching the De Anza Boulevard intersection in the right-hand lane, a dark-colored lifted pickup truck suddenly cut aggressively across my lane from a shopping plaza driveway. To avoid a catastrophic broadside T-bone collision, I made an evasive steering maneuver to the right shoulder. My vehicle mounted a low concrete drainage culvert and curbing on the front passenger side. The impact caused severe damage to the front right bumper, cracked the right side of the bumper cover, and bent the front passenger tire rim. The dark truck fled the scene immediately without stopping. Because nobody was injured and the other car fled, I did not bother waiting around for local police. I had my car towed directly to Silicon Valley Precision Collision the following morning.
